Kent Lapp, CEO

OUR STORY

A Family Business for Over 33 Years

Woodtex was established by Sanford & Barb Lapp in 1983, after they moved to Himrod, NY from Lancaster, PA. Sanford dreamed of building a business to support his young family. Within five years, Woodtex had established itself in the area, and the family had grown to include four children.

After a hard-fought battle with cancer, Sanford passed away in the fall of 1994. With little business experience, a fiercely determined Barb assumed ownership of the company, all while raising four young children. Barb kept the family business growing and handed over the reigns to her two sons, Kent and Ben, when she retired in 2010.

Today, Kent Lapp is CEO at Woodtex. Proudly continuing his parents’ heritage, Woodtex is building storage sheds, barns and garages with manufacturing plants and retail partners all across the United States. With an emphasis on quality craftsmanship, outstanding customer experiences, and Christian values, you can be sure you’ve trusted the right team to help you build the space you need for the important things in your life.
